Tom Frank introduced the topic and invited the State Librarian to share present.

Delneo shared that Department staff have begun drafting a Collection Development policy. The policy would serve as a framework for Department staff to select materials for collections and clarify the Department's scope. Delneo presented a policy drafted by Department staff for Board review, feedback, and advice.

Delneo explained that it is a best practice for a library to have a Collection Development Policy, and that the Board's role in the development was advisory. Delneo shared that there is a possibility that the Legislature will require the Department to implement a policy.

Vice Chair Adriene Frank thanked the Department for its work on the policy and requested materials be sent well in advance of future meetings whenever possible. Vice Chair Katz also asked how versions of documents are distinguished one another.

Delneo shared that the Department will continue to post all agendas and meeting links on the Board's website at least 48 hours in advance of the board's meeting. Delneo shared that supporting documents the Department has a practice of posting not required to be made available in advance, and that the Department will continue to post them as far in advance of the Board's meetings as possible.

Chair Frank asked how the Department's policy would relate to the policies of other libraries in the state. Delneo explained that the Department might be called on in the future to develop model policies, but that currently each library develops its own policy.

Lisa Barron indicated that liked the brevity and asked if the policy was based on a document. Delneo called on Assistant State Librarian Tom McMurdo to address the question. Murdoch reported that the initial draft was inspired by the state curator's policy, the Department's old policy, and policies of other libraries, and that it integrated concepts of intellectual freedom and federal rights.

Lisa Barron responded that the policy is easy to understand and covers requirements.

Chair Frank suggested those interested in discussing the collection development policy draft policy again at the April meeting of the Board let him know.
