Vermont Women: The Pay Gap, Representation, and Advancement

Tuesday, February 19, 2019

12:00-1:00 pm

Pavilion Building Auditorium

We've come a long way since women were paid 59 cents to men's dollar, but women in Vermont are still playing catch up. In Vermont 43% of women working full time aren't making enough to cover their basic needs, and they're seriously underrepresented in many fields and at the highest levels of leadership. But Vermont is also ahead of the pack in many ways when it comes to women's advancement, and we'll talk about the good news as well as the challenges on the horizon.

Cary Brown is the Executive Director of the Vermont Commission on Women, a state agency working to advance rights and opportunities for women and girls since 1964. She's worked in the gender equity field in Vermont in nonprofits, educational institutions, and government. She lives in Montpelier with her family, where she is a Justice of the Peace.
