No. There are some pencils.

Your friend Anna has never seen what is inside this tube. When Anna is back, I will show her this tube and I will ask her what she thinks is inside. What do you think Anna will say?

Reading is a social experience

- Reading simulates social experiences. It requires active participation from the reader (Mar & Oatley, 2008).
- Readers who are emotionally transported into a story are more likely to empathize with the characters (Bal & Veltkamp, 2013; Djikic et al, 2013; Johnson, 2012).
- Children as young as 5 prefer socially complex stories (Barnes & Bloom, 2014).
- Lifelong fiction readers tend to have better social skills than nonfiction readers (Bal & Veltkamp, 2013; Mar et al, 2006).
Narratives are a safe space to explore

• Direct experience can produce anxiety but reading (indirect exposure) can reduce that anxiety (Bal & Veltkamp, 2013; Johnson et al, 2013; Mar & Oatley, 2008).

• Literature allows the reader to experience and observe social interaction. This experience is more persuasive than pure instruction (Mar & Oatley, 2008).
Fiction increases empathy

• Narratives are more likely to change beliefs than nonfiction (Bal & Veltkamp, 2013; Djikic & Oatley, 2014; Mazzocco et al, 2010;).

• There is a loss of self and increased adoption of a new perspective (Bal & Veltkamp, 2013; Djikic et al, 2013; Johnson et al, 2014).

• Increased empathy means increased prosocial behavior (Djikic et al, 2013; Johnson, 2012).

Library Bill of Rights

- The American Library Association affirms that all libraries are forums for information and ideas, and that the following basic policies should guide their services.
- I. Books and other library resources should be provided for the interest, information, and enlightenment of all people of the community the library serves. Materials should not be excluded because of the origin, background, or views of those contributing to their creation.
- II. Libraries should provide materials and information presenting all points of view on current and historical issues. Materials should not be proscribed or removed because of partisan or doctrinal disapproval.
- III. Libraries should challenge censorship in the fulfillment of their responsibility to provide information and enlightenment.
- IV. Libraries should cooperate with all persons and groups concerned with resisting abridgment of free expression and free access to ideas.
- V. A person’s right to use a library should not be denied or abridged because of origin, age, background, or views.
- VI. Libraries which make exhibit spaces and meeting rooms available to the public they serve should make such facilities available on an equitable basis, regardless of the beliefs or affiliations of individuals or groups requesting their use.

Although the Articles of the Library Bill of Rights are unambiguous statements of basic principles that should govern the service of all libraries, questions do arise concerning application of these principles to specific library practices. See the documents designated by the Intellectual Freedom Committee as Interpretations of the Library Bill of Rights.
